Gas Heaters Are Getting Cheaper And Better!

The New HOLBROOK, Air-Circulating Radiating Heaters, which have just arrived at Paxman's Hardware, set a NEW LOW MARK IN PRICE and a NEW HIGH STANDARD IN QUALITY.

We consider the new HOLBROOK HEATERS which are selling at $10 to $21.50 EQUAL in Quality and Efficiency to the $40 and $50 Heaters of other manufacturers.

They are very artistic in design, and are SELF AIR CIRCULATING—a big health feature.

We have the NEW HOLBROOK HEATERS in 8, 10, and 12 radiant sizes, and the radiates are exceptionally sturdy, and if broken can be replaced at small cost.

To Worry Along Without a New Modish Coat? Never!

By JULIA BOTTOMLEY

IF "COMPETITION" is the life of trade, it is also the inspiration to creative imagination. Now there's the case of ensembles versus separate coats. With the ensemble costume about to capture the fashion world with its enduring charm it brings the matter up to the coat stylist to meet the challenge. That's why the separate topcoat this season is a thing of such beguiling beauty, women of fashion simply cannot resist them. For that matter, it would be about as unwise a thing as one could do to eliminate the separate coat from one's spring and summer wardrobe. To worry along without a modish topcoat? Never!

And about that question of "to be or not to be furred." It seems that, after all, there are some stylists who hold the opinion that a bit of choice fur makes even the handsomest coat look handsomer. So with the conviction that fine fur makes fine coats, if used discriminatingly, many of the world's leading coat designers are furring their most stunning models, either at the neck or the sleeves, but seldom if ever at both places at once.

That is if a coat has a fur collar, the sleeves are devoid of the fur cuff. And vice versa, when the sleeve is fur cuffed, the collar resorts to the self-fabric scarf for its detailing, or to some other intriguing manipulation. The models in the picture illustrate the point. Both of these adorable spring coats are posed by Laura La Plante, for somehow new fashions have taken to arriving via filmland these days. For the coat to the left, novelty patterned beige kasha is the favored medium. A beige fur collar tunes in with the color scheme, and as if that is not enough to fill the cup of beauty full to overflowing the designer adds a graceful scarf of the fabric.

Kasha cloth, but this time a very pale beige, is also used for the coat to the right. Fur on the cuffs alone is a mark of style distinction, and this model stresses the fact. A riot of tucks also adds charm to its styling. A most interesting detail is that of the self-colored yarn embroidery which elaborates both sleeves and the long pointed collar.
